FILLMORE BRIEFS.

About all the stone fruit is frozen, apples are not injured much yet. This was because of a very dry cold spring so far. Crops are backward.

Large tracts of land near this city are being transferred from holders to prospective farmers and it is now difficult to find 40 acres not claimed by speculators or actual farmers. The water is being held back by the cold nights, and the prospect is that water for irrigation will be scarce this season.

Fillmore city is having the trenches made to lay pipe for a water system. A car load of six-inch wooden pipe is ready to be laid. In the near future, we will have a pressed brick machine in operation and hereafter new building will be constructed of that kind of material, which will be much cheaper than frame houses, owing to the high price of lumber. The district and high schools are doing good work.

SHIFTING CHANNEL OF THE RIO GRANDE

Gives Rise to Question of Sovereignty Over Southern Section Of City of El Paso.

KNOWN AS CHAMIZAL ZONE.

United States Has Always Exercised Jurisdiction Over It—Valued at Several Million Dollars.

Washington, April 17.—The shifting channel of the Rio Grande river is responsible for the present diplomatic controversy over the question whether the extreme southern section of the city of El Paso, Texas, on the Mexican frontier, valued at several million dollars, really belongs to the Mexican side of the boundary line. The land involved, which is known as the Chamizal zone, and over which the United States has always exercised jurisdiction, is about a mile and a half long and five blocks wide in its widest part. It is mostly laid out in city blocks and contains a large number of homes owned and occupied principally by Mexicans.

El Paso had never considered the Mexican claims seriously until the meeting of President Taft and President Diaz in El Paso last year, when it was agreed the disputed territory for that particular occasion should be regarded as a neutral zone. The citizens of El Paso regarded this agreement as of the highest consequence, as it tended to recognize that Mexico might have a claim to the territory and steps immediately were taken to secure a definite settlement of the whole matter, as real estate values in the section involved were becoming seriously affected.

Citizens of El Paso, including the mayor, visited the state department some weeks ago and urged Secy. Knox to dispose of the question as soon as possible, representing that delay had already depressed the value of property lying within the zone. Secy. Knox gave assurances he would take up the matter immediately and hoped a conclusion might be reached within the next few weeks. The treaty of peace with Mexico which followed the war of 1848, in fixing the boundary along the Texas frontier, provided the channel of the Rio Grande should be the boundary line; but in supplementary boundary conventions, especially those of 1884 and 1889, the fact was recognized that the Rio Grande river was extremely fickle and it was agreed in the event of a change in the course of the river by accretion, the territory should remain in the country into which it had been thrown; but in the event of a change by evolution the territory involved should remain the property of the country within whose borders it originally was.

Up to a few years ago Mexico exercised to have accretions in the exercise by the United States jurisdiction over the territory now in dispute, but at that time certain claimants to the land entered suit in the federal court to determine its status. Some time ago the Mexican government submitted a proposition to the Washington authorities, in effect to withdraw its claim to the Chamizal strip if the United States would cede to Mexico an island in the Rio Grande river, 30 miles below El Paso, known as San Elizarlo island, containing about 15,000 acres. The United States, however, had strong reasons for declining this offer and, in turn, submitted a counter proposition, the terms of which have not been made public.

The managers of the "Battle Creek Sanitarium Treatment Rooms" wish to announce to their many friends and patrons that the loss occasioned by fire has been fully repaired and that more and better facilities, and they are now receiving patients for regular treatments.
